

JPMorgan Investment Funds – Global Convertibles Conservative Fund

INVESTMENT OBJECTIVE

To provide a return by investing primarily in a diversified portfolio of convertible securities, globally.

Monthly update | As at 31 January 2024

Fund Update

- The Global Convertibles Conservative Fund posted a positive performance in January, returning +0.6% net of C share class fees, outperforming the benchmark which posted -1.4%.
- At a regional level, overall performance was positive with Europe being the largest contributor, followed by North America and Japan.
- At a sector level, overall contribution was positive with technology being the largest contributor, followed by industrials and communications.
- On a relative basis, security selection in consumer, cyclical, technology and industrials contributed to alpha. We had no relative sectoral detractors over the month.
- At a security specific level, not holding Rivian Automotive and an off-benchmark position in Visa/ Barclays contributed to performance. On the other hand, key detractors stemmed from not holding Cytokinetics and Sarepta Therapeutics.

Market Update

Following the excitement seen at the end of last year, January offered mixed results for investors. While equity markets were initially boosted by strong economic data, performance was pared back by the hawkish tone at the Federal Reserve's (Fed) January meeting. The best performing major equity market was Japan's TOPIX Index, continuing the strong performance seen last year. An unexpectedly weak wage print, combined with uncertainty around the economic impact of the New Year's Day earthquake, led markets to reassess the likelihood of negative interest rate policy (NIRP) removal in the near term which in turn supported stocks. In the US, the S&P 500 Index reached record highs as optimism around a 'soft landing' scenario drove the continued outperformance of the 'Magnificent Seven' stocks. Data releases support the ongoing resilience of the US economy. First, we saw a robust jobs report, with 216,000 jobs added to the economy in December, alongside firmer wage growth and unemployment remaining steady at 3.7%. Later in the month, GDP print of 3.3% annualized for the fourth quarter was significantly above consensus expectations. However, the S&P 500 Index closed the month on a weaker note, as the hawkish tone at the Fed's January meeting was not received positively by investors. The Fed pushed back on dovish market pricing for rate cuts, and explicitly noted that a March cut seems unlikely. The MSCI Europe ex-UK Index delivered positive returns. The European Central Bank (ECB) kept rates on hold at its January meeting and re-iterated its commitment to remain data-dependent. The composite Purchasing Managers' Index (PMI) rose 0.3 points to a preliminary 47.9 in January, its highest level since July. The manufacturing measure beat expectations by 1.8 points, suggesting that activity in the sector bottomed out in the third quarter. UK equities had more muted returns. On the one hand, there have been signs of growth momentum accelerating in the UK, with the flash composite PMI increasing 0.4 points to 52.5, and consumer confidence hitting a two-year high. This optimism was tempered by the latest retail sales print, which fell sharply by 3.2% month-on-month in December, sparking some concerns of an impending slowdown. In China, the domestic economy continued to struggle, with disappointing retail sales and further deterioration in housing activity. Fourth quarter GDP grew 5.2% year-on-year, in line with expectations, but still historically weak. Although the People's Bank of China (PBOC) announced a number of stimulus measures, it was not the policy 'bazooka' markets were hoping for to re-ignite activity. Among equities, growth stocks outperformed their value counterparts. Regionally, developed market equities outperformed emerging markets. Oil prices made gains as tensions in the Middle East worsened and disruption to shipping through the Suez Canal continued. Drone attacks on Russian energy infrastructure added to the uncertainty in the global oil market.

All of this considered, global convertible bonds (CBs) (represented by the Refinitiv Global Focus Convertible Bond Index) posted negative returns over the month, curbing the rates-driven momentum that powered CBs higher in November and December last year. We saw a bit of divergence regionally with all regions except Japan posting performance in the negative territory with Asia being the largest detractor, followed by US and Europe.

Global issuance in January totaled just under USD 5.2bn, which though disappointing versus elevated expectations for 2024, were aligned closely with history amid holiday hangover and earnings blackout. Regionally, we saw about USD2.3bn from US, Europe clocking USD 1.1bn and Asia ex-Japan at USD 0.4bn. A special note on Japan, where the primary market saw almost USD 1.4bn, an impressive feat for a relatively small market, driven entirely by one large two-tranche deal.

Market Outlook

While strong economic data added credence to market hopes for a ‘soft landing’, it also made pre-emptive rate cuts in the first quarter look less likely. The risks to the global economy have certainly not disappeared and on top of the macro uncertainties, there are numerous political and geopolitical uncertainties. Wars are still ongoing on multiple frontiers that have the potential to deliver further commodity price shocks through the global economy and 2024 is a big year for national elections, with 40 nations scheduled to go to the polls, which includes four of the world’s five most populous countries. However, from a fundamental perspective, 2024 does look like a better year than 2023. Our research team sees global corporate earnings growing around 10% after two years of little or no growth in most regions. While this may feel high in the context of weaker GDP, there are a number of robust bottom-up drivers of this growth and cause for excitement for fundamental stock pickers. In addition, valuations look reasonable on our long-term forecasts and are in line with historic averages. International equities are likely to benefit this year from positive structural changes, a weaker dollar, and exciting governance changes. In the US, mega cap tech will need to continue to beat an ever-higher bar when it comes to high earnings expectations. A softer landing for the economy is likely to benefit more cyclical regions such as Europe and emerging markets, while in the event of a deeper downturn, the more defensive characteristics of the UK market may come to the fore. Additionally, expectations of corporate reform in Japan and a less conservative approach to balance sheet management and shareholder returns have revived enthusiasm for Japanese stocks, further supporting the case for international diversification. Another positive driver for international markets is the narrowing growth differentials between the US and other countries as Japan and emerging markets excluding China are set to deliver positive growth, and the Eurozone and China are likely to bottom out. We expect a broadening of market leadership this year and there is some near-term caution over the big AI winners of 2023. Our highest conviction view across equity markets continue to be higher quality stocks - those with robust balance sheets, proven management teams and a stronger ability to defend margins. Naturally some of these will be found in the technology sector, but there are also good examples in more cyclical sectors such as industrials and financials, as well as more traditionally defensive sectors such as healthcare.
